Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 02 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Early cloud, with more sunny spells later. Staying dry.

Today:
The brightest spells in the far west initially, but cloudier elsewhere. Through late morning and the afternoon, cloud gradually breaks, giving some warm sunny spells throughout. Remaining dry, breezy along coasts. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Tonight:
A brighter evening for most, but feeling cool again. Clear periods for a while overnight, making for a chilly night under starry skies. Some low cloud returning later. Remaining dry. Minimum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Friday:
A bright start for most, with the most sunshine in the west. Some cloud builds through the day, though skies remain brighter than recently. Feeling warm in the sunshine. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Largely dry with sunny spells on Saturday. Breezier on Sunday and Monday with some warm sunshine, but also a risk of showers, these perhaps turning heavy.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.